

Moore's 5 Queen Street Place
Southwark bridge

My beloved friend 14/10 45

It is how long since I heard from thee & as our Shelnford is sending its little tribute to your magnificent bazaar will thou regard it as too great a bestowment to reciprocate a dingdong of your Liberty Bell that may proclaim liberty through all our land to whites as well as blacks & by its spirit stirring contents sweep away the refuge of lies that has benighted the fair form of truth for so many ages but now in this nineteenth century from its lovely impersonation by our divine Lord himself who spoke as never man spoke is at last beginning to be seen & acknowledged & his command from the mountain as Matthew records in chapter 24 verse applied to the down trodden ^{half of the} human family they are slowly lifting up their ground mother's right ^{claps} of purging & scaling their long abused sight at the fountain itself of heavenly radiance oh may the imperish be soon felt in the melting the cold iron of our manacles & lifting our poor bending forms into the uprising of humanity no longer thruiv & alas too many, play things but dignified & holy creatures rising into the stature of rational thinking happy & useful beings, will thou not withhold from my longing eyes the book whatever it be now lately issued on the subject of woman E. Pease our dear friend tells me of it but has not seen it & why not? These things ought to be sent darting off like lightning to all the world if possible have you a copy of your last report to spare & strange request! have you the Martyr's life! a thrilling little book I lent it when at Paris & like my books there, ^{it} has not been returned to the owner I want to have it bound in with spirit-stirring title & words a beautiful accompaniment & pray scot your American friends here for not getting your literature more quickly I hope your bazaar this year will be as magnificent as

The last & far surfeit is that every year will be greater than its precursor cheering your hearts & strengthening your hands to renewed toil against the monster, by this cruel annexation of Texas more horrible than ever with a pro-slavery emperor too alas alas! but never mind perhaps a stronger than he will dispossess him I should greatly delight in one more letter from my animated pen & have expected to my dear sister also the wish of her kind interest for the woman book if you will not reject the petition of your truly affectionate friend

-5681 Anne Knight

Sol, dear Maria that I mean it can be that a copy of a book sent to me should have this effect in our land do not mistake me